BACKBONE.

When you see a fellow mortal
Without fixed and fearless views,
Hanging on the skirts of others,
Walking in their cast-off shoes,
Bowing low to wealth or favor,
With abject, uncovered head,
Ready to retract or waver,
Willing to be drove or led;
Walk yourself with firmer bearing,
Throw your moral shoulders back,
Show your spine has nerve and marrow—
Just the things which his must lack.

A stronger word
Was never heard
In sense and tone,
Than this, backbone.

When you see a theologian
Hugging close some ugly creed,
Fearing to reject or question
Dogmas which his priest may read,
Holding back all noble feeling,
Choking down each manly view,
Caring more for forms and symbols
Than to know the good and true;
Walk yourself with firmer bearing,
Throw your moral shoulders back,
Show your spine has nerve and marrow—
Just the things which his must lack.

A stronger word
Was never heard
In sense and tone,
Than this, backbone.

When you see a politician
Crawling through contact holes,
Begging for some fat position,
In the ring or at the polls,
With no sterling manhood in him—
Nothing stable, broad or sound,
Destitute of pluck or ballast,
Walk yourself with firmer bearing,
Throw your moral shoulders back,
Show your spine has nerve and marrow—
Just the things which his must lack.

A stronger word
Was never heard
In sense and tone,
Than this, backbone.

A modest song and plainly told—
The text is worth a mine of gold;
For many men most sadly lack
A noble stiffness in the back.

THE MAN IN THE IRON MASK.

It was into one of the bombproofs of the Fortress of St. Marguerite, on the 30th day of April, 1693, a man was introduced by Monsieur de St. Mars. He had conducted him from Pignerol, in Piedmont, then a province of France, where he had been incarcerated since 1662. This prisoner, wore upon his face, night and day, a black black velvet fastened upon bands of copper, and so constructed as to permit of the free use of the mouth. The furniture of his prison was of the most sumptuous description. The vessels of his toilet and of his table were of silver, and Saint Mars, who served him with food, never presumed to sit in his presence. The order was to kill him the moment he uncovered his face. The fame of this prisoner has gone through all the countries of the world, as

THE MAN IN THE IRON MASK.

One day the prisoner wrote upon a silver plate, with the point of his knife, and threw it out of his window towards a fisherman's boat that lay just under the wall of his prison. The fisherman picked it up and carried it to the Governor of the Fortress, St. Mars. He took it, greatly astonished, and asked the fisherman if he had read what was written upon it; and upon his replying that he did not know how to read, he had him held in custody until he had the most positive proof of the fact, and that the plate had been seen by no one else; he then dismissed him, saying: "You are an unfortunate fellow in not knowing how to read." Immediately after this occurrence, the Governor had fastened into the walls about twelve feet thick, outside of the one window of his prison, a triple net-work of strong iron bars. They are still to be seen there, half consumed by rust.

No demand of the prisoner, possible to supply, was refused him. He had the greatest fondness, amounting to a kind of mania, for the finest linen and laces. The fact is well known that, at the request of Madame de Saint Mars, Madame de Bre, her intimate friend, busied herself at Paris in choosing the finest linens and most beautiful laces, which were sent to him in prison.

One day a frater saw something white floating on the water, under the window of his prison. He crept around the foot of the wall, and drew it up, and carried it to St. Mars. It was very tightly folded up. St. Mars unfolded it, and found it to be a fine linen shirt, upon which the prisoner had written from end to end. With an air of great concern he asked the frater if he had the curiosity to read what was written upon the shirt. The latter protested many times that he had read nothing. Nevertheless, two days later he was found dead in his bed.

Another time he demanded that they should bring in a woman to live with him in his prison. A woman of Mongins was found willing, for the price offered, which was a fortune for her poor children. But when she was about entering the door of the prison, she was told she was never to come out, or see her children, or to have any relation with any human being. She refused to be shut up with a prisoner whose acquaintance cost so dear.

At one time the arrogant minister of Louis XIV, the infamous Duke du Louvois, came to see the prisoner, and it was observed that he stood up in his presence, and spoke to him with great respect and humility.

In September 1698, the prisoner was transferred, still under the conduct of St. Mars, to the Bastille, in Paris, where, as one may still read in the journal of Monsieur du Jones, the King's lieutenant of the Bastille, "he died suddenly, on the 19th of November, 1703, at 4 o'clock p. m." "Surprised by death," says the lieutenant, "he was not able to receive the sacraments, but our almoner exhorted him a moment before he died." In the night after his decease, they buried him in the cemetery of the parish of St. Paul's, under the name of Marchiali, age about 49 years. On the morning of his interment, a person bribed the grave-digger to uncover the body, thinking to get a view of the unmasked face, as the faces of the dead are usually unmasked. They found, in the place of the head, a large stone.

"The old surgeon of the Bastille," says Voltaire, "told me that he had often seen the tongue of this unknown, but never his face; he was a person admirably well made, with a slightly brown skin, and a most engaging voice. He never complained of his condition."

When the people of Paris took the Bastille, in July, 1789, upon examining its register it was found that the leaf, corresponding to the year 1693, the year of his entrance there, had been cut out. And who was "The Man in the Iron Mask"? Many volumes have been filled with conjectures in which the names of men of many countries and various conditions, and some women, too, have figured—the Duke of Beaufort, for instance, surmised

KING OF THE HALLES, who was the natural son of Cesar de Vendome, the natural son of Henry IV, of Gabriel de Baires. But at the defense of Candie, in 1699, the Turks took this King of the Halls, cut off his head, and sent it to Constantinople. The Duke of Monmouth was another. But, well authenticated state records prove that the blessed King James had him publicly executed in the city of London, in 1685.

Machiotti, secretary of the Duke of Mantua, was another. And an old physician of Cannes, who was called to visit him professionally in his prison at St. Marguerite, declared that "The Man in the Iron Mask was a woman; that he knew it by the feeling of his pulse."

Whoever he was, it is quite evident that the old fox, Cardinal Richelieu, and the powers he moved himself with, did not wish to have his face seen. Nor did he deem it expedient to conceal it at once and forever in the grave; it served him better to keep it as a menace for his enemies.

In "an addition of the editor" to the work of Voltaire, published in 1771, and, consequently, while he, Voltaire, was still living, and which "addition" the learned bibliographer Beuchot, ascribes to Voltaire himself, it is written: "The Man in the Iron Mask was, without doubt, and consequently the brother of Louis XIV, but not the son of Louis XIII, her husband."

Whoever would know the whole argument may consult the said "addition of the editor" in the published works of Voltaire, or by a shorter cut may read in a letter of Benjamin Franklin, written while he was ambassador at the Court of Versailles, to John Jay, as follows:

"Yesterday I had a conversation with the Duke de Richelieu. He seems favorably disposed towards our cause. I flattered him very much in speaking of the administration of his glorious relative, the Cardinal de Richelieu. I took advantage of this occasion to ask him if he was ignorant as to whom the Man in the Iron Mask was, since it was quite evident that he must have been born during the administration of the Cardinal. My interlocutor at first took an air of great mystery, then, telling me that the matter in question was a secret of State, he revealed to me what follows, and which, without fear, I confide to you. The Iron Mask was a child of Anne of Austria, and probably the Duke of Buckingham was his father. The queen, having no other son whom she dared confide, threw herself into the arms of her enemy, the Cardinal, who arranged everything so as to hide the affair from the king. It was this event which determined Richelieu to bring the king and the queen together—the latter, up to this time, having been considered barren; thence the birth of Louis XIV, and of Monsieur. The illegitimate child, at first confined to Madame de Motteville, was, after the death of Richelieu, taken away from her by Mazarin, who, from the age of sixteen years until his death, kept him shut up in prison. The resemblance of the captive to Louis XIV, was astonishing; and thence the mask which made him wear. They wished to avoid political complications as well as to hide the weakness of Anne of Austria."

The story runs that Louis XIV, only knew of the existence of this elder brother from Cardinal Mazarin at the hour of his death, and then when near his own end, he confided the secret to the Regent d'Orleans, from whose daughter, Mlle. de Vallois, afterwards Duchess of Modena, the Duke de Richelieu obtained it also period when he was her lover.

JOB WORK neatly executed at Kentucky Yeoman Office.

MEDICAL.

Ayer's Sarsaparilla, FOR PURIFYING THE BLOOD.

The reputation this excellent medicine enjoys, is derived from its cures, many of which are truly marvellous. Incurable cases of Scrofulous disease, where the system seemed saturated with corruption, have been purified and cured by its Scurfulous affections and disorders, which were aggravated by the scrofulous contamination until they were painfully affecting, have been radically cured in such great numbers, in almost every section of the country, that the public scarcely need to be informed of its virtues or uses.

Scrofulous poison is one of the most destructive enemies of our race. Often, this unseen and uretic poison of the organism undermines the constitution, and invites the attack of enfeebling or fatal diseases, without exciting a suspicion of its presence. Again, it seems to breed infection throughout the body, and, then, on some favorable occasion, rapidly develop into one or other of its hideous forms, either on the surface or among the vitals. In the latter, tubercles may be suddenly deposited in the lungs or heart, or tumors formed in the liver, or foul ulcers on some part of the body. Hence the occasional use of a bottle of this Sarsaparilla is advisable, even when no active symptoms of its Scrofulous nature are present. Persons afflicted with the following complaints, will find immediate relief, and, at the same time, cure, by the use of this Sarsaparilla: It is: St. Anthony's Fire, Rose or Erysipelas, Scald Head, Ringworm, Sore Eyes, Sore Ears, and other eruptions of the skin, and all the various forms of Scrofulous disease. Also in the more chronic forms, as: Eczema, Dropsy, Heart Disease, Fits, Epilepsy, and the various Ulcerous affections of the muscular and nervous systems.

Syphilis or Venereal and Mercerial Diseases are cured by it, though a long time is required for subduing the morbid influences by any medicine. But long continued use of this medicine will cure the complaints. Leucorrhoea or Whites, Uterine Discharges, and Female Diseases, are commonly soon relieved and ultimately cured by its purifying and invigorating effect. Minute Discharges, even when no active symptoms of its Scrofulous nature are present, will find immediate relief, and, at the same time, cure, by the use of this Sarsaparilla: It is: St. Anthony's Fire, Rose or Erysipelas, Scald Head, Ringworm, Sore Eyes, Sore Ears, and other eruptions of the skin, and all the various forms of Scrofulous disease. Also in the more chronic forms, as: Eczema, Dropsy, Heart Disease, Fits, Epilepsy, and the various Ulcerous affections of the muscular and nervous systems.

These Pills are an unfailing Female Regulator, intended for special cures; those afflicted ones where milder and cheaper medicines fail.

They are composed of the most active and powerful principles of plants, roots and berries, so highly concentrated that each pill contains more medicinal strength than a whole box or bottle of ordinary druggist's medicine in the market. Although covered by a delicate and agreeable taste, in their operation, that the most feeble can take them with perfect safety.

Each Price, $5 per box, sold by all Druggists. All letters seeking information or advice, will be promptly answered.

WILLIAM CROMLEY,

WHOLESALE

PAPER DEALER,

And Agent for the sale

We had the pleasure of meeting yesterday with the venerable Harry Daniel, of Mt. Sterling, who is in the city attending the Court of Appeals. Familiar with his name from an early period of our manhood, as a staunch Jackson Democrat, it was difficult to realize that we viewed, in his yet hale form, one whose experience goes far back into the past. Although in the 86th year of his age, his faculties are unimpaired, and he exhibits extraordinary vigor of mind and body.

Capt. Daniel is a native of Louisa county, Virginia, and came to Kentucky in 1798, settling first in Clark county, but moved afterwards to Montgomery. In 1808 he read law in Mr. Clay's office. In 1812 he became a soldier in the war with Great Britain, and in 1813 was made a captain in the regular army. In 1827, he was elected to Congress, and continued a member until 1833. Since then he has not been, we believe, in public life, though has always taken an active interest in politics, and always as a Democrat having made two speeches in the last gubernatorial canvass.

COMBINATION AGRICULTURAL ASSOCIATION.

We learn from a friend at Lawrenceburg that the Salvia Agricultural Association have disbanded, and that the leading members have united with citizens of Lawrenceburg and Anderson in the organization of an association, to be known as the Anderson, Franklin, and Salvia Agricultural and Mechanical Association, the stockholders of which are to be composed also of leading farmers of the parts of Mercer, Woodford, Franklin, and Shelby near to Anderson county. It is designed to make it a large and useful association, and the projectors invite the active interest of the farmers of all the counties named. It has become apparent that there are too many local associations to promote the good desired, and this tendency to a combination of several counties, as seen in other portions of the State, indicates a healthy step in the right direction. A sufficient amount of stock has been subscribed to authorize a preliminary organization, and the first Saturday in April next has been fixed for a meeting of the stockholders to organize permanently, and make arrangements for the first annual fair.

Banker Hill is, to be cut down—not the monument, but the hill on which it is situated, leaving the monument standing on a pedestal of earth. As the hill is to be cut down forty-five feet, it will make the monument relatively that much higher. The earth which will come from the hill is to be used in filling up marshy flats near by, and in this way about 150 acres of additional building lots and streets will be secured. The project will require the lowering of nearly 500 houses and one church, with the removal of a cemetery containing 8,000 corpses. The estimated cost of the improvement is between three or four millions. This looks like desecrating the spot on which Warren fell, and where, according to John Hickman, he said it was "pleasant and decorous" to die for one's country.

The New York World has a slashing criticism on Joaquin Miller's book of poetry, "Songs of the Sierras," just issued in this country by Roberts Brothers, Boston. It classes him with Walt Whitman, and styles his productions don't care-a-damn poetry. He also accuses him of imitating Swinburne and Browning. His real name, it says, is not Joaquin, which, by the by, should be pronounced, Ho-keen, but Cincinnati's H. Altogether it is pretty rough on the new American candidate for fame, so recently discovered by the English.

The finest apples we have seen this season are some brought to our office by Geo. W. Robb, Esq., who lives just over the Woodford line near Dacker's Station. They are the "non-such." He informs us that his crop is fine, which is an exceptional thing, as scarcely an orchard anywhere near here has borne fruit. Mr. Robb also brought us splendid specimens of the Brazil and Nansmond sweet potatoes.

Gen. Robert Anderson, of Sumpter fame, is said to be living in Switzerland in poverty.

It is only comparative poverty, as contrasted with the luxuriance in which some of his old army friends live with their increased pay, commutation of quarters, rations, &c. He cannot be in danger of starving, as being on the retired list, he gets the half pay of a brigadier general in the regular army, and that in Switzerland, where a dollar goes as far as, five here, would make the old gentleman as comfortable as he. He ought to live sumptuously on it.

SALE OF FINE HORSES.—Mr. James M. Siffell has sold to Maj. W. D. Acton, of Georgia, his pair of stylish geldings, for the sum of $950. They have taken a number of premiums at the neighboring fairs, and Maj. Acton may congratulate himself upon his acquisition.

Our friend, W. L. Jett, Esq., of this city, has taken his departure for Forsythe, Georgia, where, in a few days, he will terminate an interesting romance, which had its origin during the war, by leading to the altar one of the fair daughters of that State.

SELECT HOR.—There will be a select hop, under efficient management, at the Valley Hall, over George Buhr's billiard saloon to-night. Good music, and everything else requisite to make those who attend enjoy themselves will be provided.

A correspondent of the Louisville Ledger of yesterday suggests the name of Hon. William Lindsay, of the Court of Appeals, as a suitable candidate for the United States Senate.

Hon. J. B. Beck has returned home after an absence of several weeks in attendance upon the Ku-Klux Committee at Washington. He will have to turn early in November.

THE KENTUCKY HIGH SCHOOL—PURCHASE OF SCHOOL PROPERTY.

The board of directors of the Kentucky High School, we are gratified to learn, have purchased the property of W. A. Gaines, Esq., in South Frankfort, as a location for the school, and will get possession on the first of November. The site is an eligible one, and the buildings ample and well adapted for the purpose. The price paid is $20,000, on favorable payments. Mr. Gaines, about a year ago, paid $12,500 for it, but has expended a large sum in improvements and repairs. The lot comprises nearly six acres. This step gives assurance to the people of Frankfort, if any further were needed, that this institution is now established on a firm basis, and that its energetic board of directors intend to leave nothing undone to place it in the first rank, as far as affording facilities for the education of the youth of both sexes is concerned. Its course of studies begins where that of the city school leaves off, and offers a curriculum as thorough as is generally found in colleges; so that our citizens can thus, at small cost, secure a thorough education for their children without an excuse for sending them off, while in time, its advantages will attract many scholars from a distance. The faculty has received a valuable acquisition in the recent election of Professor Thurmond to the chair of languages.

THE SHORT-HORN RECORD.—A year or two ago, Mr. A. J. Alexander, the well-known stock raiser of Woodford, published a volume with the above title, and now, we have before us a second volume, of about two hundred pages, containing the pedigrees of seven or eight hundred thorough-bred animals, owned by the principal short horn breeders. It is a valuable work for all engaged in the rearing of such stock, and its preparation for the press does credit to Major Humphrey Evans, to whom Mr. Alexander refers in the preface, as its topographical execution does to the Yeoman office, from which it issues. Persons desiring copies of the book should address Major H. Evans, Spring Station, Woodford county, Ky.

We have also before us the catalogue of shot-horns belonging to Mr. Alexander, embracing fifty-five cows and heifers and eleven bulls. Copies of which can also be obtained from Major Evans.

GRAND OPENING.—Mrs. C. E. Ayers will open her splendid stock of fall and winter millinery goods on Thursday, October 12th, 1871, consisting of French flowers, feathers, French felt hats, pattern bonnets, &c., &c.; also, choice novelties selected with them. Ladies will please call and examine for themselves.

The New Orleans Picayune says: "According to calculations based on official figures or fair estimates, the holders of property in New Orleans pay, in Federal, State, and municipal taxes, more than ten per cent. of the total assessed value of all personal and real property within the limits of the parish of Orleans. According to the judgment and deliberate opinion of business men, not only the people of this city and Louisiana, but the people of the entire South, are now paying out in the shape of taxes more than the actual income upon their property and industry. We are working merely for our subsistence, our victuals, and clothes; all our profits are absorbed in taxes."

We had the pleasure of a visit yesterday from Captain Cannon, of the far-famed steamer R. E. Lee, who is spending a week or two here with his family. He informs us that he has lately repaired and refitted his boat at an expense of thirty thousand dollars, and that she is now as good as the day she was launched, and doing a fine business in the southern trade.

MR. MILES' SALE.—We learn from Mr. Miles that the sale of his property will positively take place on October 11th, as advertised in this paper. Instead of twenty cattle, as advertised, he will have some fifty or sixty nice young cattle, among them a lot of fat heifers, one and two years old.

THE DECEMBER ECLIPSE OF THE SUN.—On the 12th of next December there is to be a total eclipse of the sun. It will be visible close by Arabia, first in the open sea. It will traverse the northern part of the Indian Peninsula. It will thence pass across the northern extremity of Ceylon. It will not touch land again until it reaches the south of Sumatra and the western extremity of Java. Thence it will cross the northern parts of Australia, and, except in some of the smaller islands of the Polynesian group, it will not be seen again on land. The governments of Europe, particularly that of Great Britain, are preparing to send out expeditions to the available points of observation, and it is stated that some of the best astronomers of Great Britain and France, encouraged by the results of the experiments made on the occasion of the last solar eclipse, are determined at all hazards to find their way to Java, and from that point of observation to examine once more, with all the aid that science can give, the sun's corona. What action, if any, the United States Government will take in the matter has not been made known.

Attention is called to the advertisement in another column of Mrs. Von Borries, who has just returned from the East, and is receiving a very large assortment of millinery goods, &c. Her grand opening day will be on the 12th inst.

A VALUABLE PAPER.—The meeting of the National Teachers' Association held in St. Louis, last month, drew together a large number of the leading educators of the country, representing almost every State in the Union. Papers of great interest and permanent value were presented on various subjects, many of which, together with the discussions upon them, are given in the last number of the Journal of Education, thus, making this, one of the most valuable papers ever issued. Teachers, school officers and others interested in this subject, will find this journal a constant and valuable aid to them.

Address, J. B. Merwin, editor and publisher, 710 Chestnut street, St. Louis, Mo.

(For the Yeoman.) EXCURSION TO CALIFORNIA.

The town of Gilmore, a small place, is ten miles from Omaha, and the ascent is very gradual to it, and the elevation, according to the guide, 976 feet. There is nothing about it particularly attractive. About twenty miles from Gilmore, Elkhorn Station is located. This is where the trade of Elkhorn valley comes. The station is some four or five miles from the crossing of Elk river. The valley of this stream, or large creek—for it ought not to be called a river—is said to be near ten miles wide, with productive land, nearly all taken up by Germans for something like a hundred miles.

Some twenty miles further on, the town of Fremont is located, which is the county seat of Dodge county, Nebraska. The railroad company have excellent buildings here, including an eating-house, which is very well kept. The Platte river hills can be seen from this place, and the river is three or four miles off. The Sioux City and Pacific Railroad connects here with Union Pacific. This town shows that it has an active, industrious population in it, and from its surroundings will soon become a place of much importance.

Leaving Fremont the railroad comes close to Platte river on the north side, and keeps in sight of the old emigrant road for many miles, over which thousands toiled with their mule and ox teams in days gone by. One could but imagine what resolution the thousands had, who passed up this river, with nothing but the wilds of nature to be seen, excepting now and then an Indian or some waving and sailing, and sickness came, there was suffering, and often no means of alleviation. In death, rude burial, when the loved one's remains were placed in the ground, with nothing about them but their blankets and the cold earth.

None but those who had friends or relatives thus laid away, can appreciate the sadness of heart such losses occasioned. I was wretched enough upon me, when in dreamy condition, to create the images in my imagination of long lines of wagons passing up the river with men, women, and children to be seen in the caravans. I fancied I could hear the teamsters encouraging their tired animals, or some rough fellow cursing his nearly worn-out oxen. When how back, give bright light, and the twilight of your tale, away, it is to be regretted, of keeping the files off with it. Then again would come the attack of the Indians, the war-horn, the fight, and, perhaps, the massacre of a whole train.

Those days are past, and that class of our fellow-countrymen have either settled down in the agricultural districts, made fortunes in the mines, or passed away. It is to be regretted, to a better life. The Indians have been forced on to other hunting grounds, and here and there the whites are building their habitations and beginning to till the earth. The Platte river is very wide and shallow, and continually changing its bed, which is made up of a yellowish sand, into which men and animals often sink almost as soon as they step upon it.

The valleys of the Platte in the spring must look beautiful, when covered with a rich coating of grass, and decorated with flowers; but when we passed over them, the heat and drought of the summer had destroyed their beauties. The river is not navigable for anything but a light clip, and that would, in any case, be ground on a sand or a sand-bar before it would float a half mile. There seems to be tall enough in it to have the waters taken from it for irrigation, and doubtless this will be the use made of the stream very soon.

North Bend, some 15 miles from Fremont, is a nice little village, of some three or four hundred inhabitants. It is situated on a sand-bar, and in the midst of a good body of land. From here we rode near the river bank for some miles, and could see that the chief growth of timber on it was cotton wood.

An enterprising people might soon have large tracts of land covered with this growth of timber, and with locust and maple, all fast growing, and useful for timber and fuel. The elevation at North Bend is between twelve and thirteen hundred feet.

Some fourteen or fifteen miles further on is Schuyler, the county seat of Colfax county. These names will keep it forever a small-potato town—a pin-point of place. If the people shall ever appreciate the names properly, they will for their own interest have them changed. Schuyler, Colfax, brings up in memory the small dog of a small Radical, during the war and since. He, like Chase, had too often boasted of having educated himself into a disregard of a constitutional obligation, ever to be treated in any other light than as a pestiferous little creature. I often imagine some of the states of the Union, at the head of the Judiciary of the United States, when he remembers the speech he made at the peace conference before the war, about having educated himself into a disregard of the constitutional duty of surrendering fugitives from labor, and what he would think of a disregard of the decisions of the court of which he is chief justice, as he and his co-fugitives regarded the decision in the Dred Scott case. He may last to see their precedents followed by some other party who don't like some of the Supreme Court's decisions.

Negro Ku-Klux Burn a School House and Shoot a Democratic Horse.

On Friday night, about 2 o'clock, some six or seven hundred persons, armed with fire arms, rode into the Rial Kirby house, on Henry Thomas' place, calling by John Lamkin or Sherman, and calling him out, fired small shots into him, and as he rapidly retreated fired several pistol shots at him, which lodged in the house. Jim has always voted the Democratic ticket and had been threatened by some of the Radical crew. He recognized some of the party. In the same neighborhood the new school house at Pleasant Green Church was burned down evening before last, about seven o'clock. School had adjourned at 4 1/2 P. M., and there was only a little fire left in a new stove, besides the fire was seen to commence on the outside. Dr. Cannon's sons made haste to the house when the fire blazed was discovered, but before they had gone four hundred yards the whole east side was in flames. This house had just been erected, and was a frame building that cost about $400. Of course there was no insurance.—Paris Kentuckian.

THE DUTCH GAP CANAL.—Ben. Butler's Dutch Gap Canal, which was intended to change the current of James River in Virginia, is thus referred to by a correspondent of the Richmond Enquirer:

"Dutch Gap Canal is now an object not only of historical but also of practical interest to every traveler down James River. Until quite recently the work was supposed to have been a failure. Butler made the necessary excavation, but was unable to turn the current of the river sufficiently to render the canal useful. The surging flood of last October removed this difficulty and now steamers and ships of the largest kind may pass safely through it. Workmen are now widening and improving the opening so as to secure its benefits permanently.

It may surprise many of your readers who have not looked into the matter closely to know that the canal seems only forty or fifty yards long, and when it is fully completed vessels will pass this short distance instead of being compelled to make a curve of seven miles, as formerly."

An old river man, says the Paducah Kentuckian, predicts that the Ohio river will be lower in the next thirty days than it has been since the flood.

THE TRI-WEEKLY YEOMAN.

Clay and Buchanan—Interesting Re-miniscences.

(From the Washington Chronicle.)
Henry Clay, who fully forgave James Buchanan for the part he played in 1824-25 in the celebrated bargain and sale by which it was charged that Clay gave the vote of Kentucky to John Quincy Adams for President instead of Gen. Jackson, in consideration of his subsequent appointment by Adams to the department of State. Buchanan was then a Representative in Congress from the old Lancaster, Chester, and Delaware district in Pennsylvania. Chosen originally as a Federalist, he became a Democrat under the influence of Jackson's popularity, while Clay, originally a Democrat, became a violent Whig antagonist of Jackson and his party. In 1824-5, Buchanan was in his thirty-fifth year, and Clay in his forty-seventh. The accusation that Clay had supported Adams for a place in his cabinet, long insisted upon by his adversaries, aroused the bitterest passions, and was thought of and indignantly repelled by himself. He was made to believe that the story was started by the young member from Lancaster, but this was always denied by the latter, and he wrote several letters effectually disproving it, but they were not satisfactory to the imperious Kentuckian. It will be recollected that John Randolph, of Virginia, was one of Clay's fiercest assailants, and he carried his enmity so far that it led to a duel between them, which terminated without bloodshed. Some ten years later, Clay and Buchanan were both in the United States Senate together, and the latter was one of the leaders of the Democracy. Clay did not conceal his dislike of the Pennsylvanian, and sought every occasion to show it. One memorable day he rose and made a studied attack upon the Democrats, and especially upon Gen. Jackson. Mr. Buchanan was put forward to answer him, which he did with his best ability. When he took his seat, Mr. Clay rose, with well-feigned surprise, and sarcastically remarked that "he had made no allusion to the Senator from Pennsylvania. He was referring to the leaders, not to the subordinates of the Democracy." Upon which Buchanan took the floor and said that the Senator from Kentucky was certainly in error, because he had pointed out and repeatedly looked at him while he was speaking. Clay quickly retorted by alluding to Buchanan's slight obliquity of vision. "I beg to say, Mr. President," he remarked, "that the mistake was the Senator's, and not mine. Unlike him, sir, I do not look one way and row another." It was a cruel thrust; and when a gentleman reproached Clay for his harshness, he shrugged his shoulders, and said "Oh, don't mind him, he deserves it," he writes letters." On another occasion Buchanan defended himself against the charge of hostility to the second war with England by showing that he had formed a troop of Lancaster horse, and rode to Baltimore to resist the invader. "Yes, Mr. President," was Clay's prompt rejoinder, "I remember that event, and I remember also that by the time the Senator got into Maryland and the enemy had left, he had heard of the approach of the distinguished gentleman and retired before the prestige of his courage."

But time, if it does not make all things even, mollifies the passions of men. Mr. Buchanan was too much a man of the world—to accomplish a courtier—not to soften the asperity of so proud a spirit as Clay. They frequently met in society in after years, especially at the dinner-table. If they did not become friends, they at least ceased to be enemies. And in 1856, when Buchanan became the Democratic candidate for President, he had no more hearty supporter than the son of the great Kentuckian, James B. Clay, who, after having served in the Confederate army, died at Montreal on the 29th of January, 1864.

Benton, who had always opposed Buchanan's aspirations, because he regarded him as weak and timid, powerfully championed him in that year, even against his own son-in-law, Fremont. Rufus Choate, Webster's nearest friend, was on the same side; so were John Van Buren and his father, notwithstanding both held Buchanan's friends accountable for the nomination of Polk in 1844. Webster himself, had he lived, would, I think, have voted the same way; and perhaps Henry Clay would have preferred the man who so solemnly pledged himself to put an end to the slavery agitation. They both died, Clay in September and Webster in October of 1852, and so were spared the mortification of Choate, Benton and the Van Burens, when James Buchanan yielded to the fire-eaters and tried to force slavery into Kansas.

Curiosities of Life.
Lay your finger on your pulse, and know that at every stroke some immortal passes to his Maker—some fellow-being crosses the river of death—and if we think of it, we may well wonder that it should be so long before our turn comes.

Half of all who live die before seventy.
Only one person in ten thousand lives to be one hundred years old, and but one in a hundred reaches sixty.
The married live longer than the single.
There is one soldier to every eight persons, and out of every thousand born only ninety-five weddings take place.

If you take a thousand persons who have reached seventy years, there are of Clergymen, orators and public speakers. . . . 43
Farmers . . . . . 40
Workmen . . . . . 33
Soldiers . . . . . 32
Lawyers . . . . . 29
Professors . . . . . 27
Doctors . . . . . 24

These statements are very instructive. Farmers and workmen do not arrive at good old age as often as the clergy and others who perform no manual labor; but this is owing to the neglect of the laws of health, instruction in proper habits of life in eating, drinking, sleeping, dress, and the proper care of themselves after the work of the day is done. These farmers or workmen eat a heavy supper of a summer's day and sit around the doors in their shirt-sleeves, and in their tired condition and weakened circulation are easily chilled, laying the foundation for diarrhoea, bilious colic, lung fever, or consumption.

A newly invented fly paper, in Titusville, is covered with nitro-glycerine, glue, and molasses. The flies attracted by the molasses alight, and are stuck fast by the glue. Should any get away, they proceed to rub their legs together in ecstasy, when the friction of their own skins causes the nitro-glycerine adhering to their feet and limbs to explode, blowing them to atoms.

Archbishop Whately once wrote to Mrs. Arnold: "I remember one of my parishioners at Halesworth telling me that he thought a person should not go to church to be made uncomfortable. I replied that I thought so, too; but whether it should be the sermon or the man's life that should be altered so as to avoid the discomfort must depend on whether the doctrine was right or wrong."

A political orator in New Orleans recently crowded history by referring to "the iron coffin of DeSoto, containing the gold trumpet presented to that illustrious discoverer by Queen Victoria." "Why, you fool," exclaimed an intelligent auditor, "Queen Victoria wasn't born for more than two hundred years after DeSoto died, and how could she give him a gold trumpet?" "She left it to him in her will," solemnly replied the orator.

Lord Shaftesbury told at Glasgow of his having whitewashed and painted one of the dirty houses occupied by a family in the foul district of London, and a short time afterward returning to find it worse than ever. He said, "What on earth is this?" and the reply was, "Place your hands on the house, looked so cold and uncomfortable that I sent for the sweep, and axed him to give us a few warm touches."

What the teamster told his horse—a tale of woe.
